Use your passion and geek expertise to liberate the latent creativity that resides in readers, something that works better than the linear, sequential and fast fading stream of comments (yeah, this is recursive). Comments are writing, but lets have something not as we know it. Writing in this box just feel a little klunky, there must be a better way, make a better blog :)##imported-begin##Valeria_Massachusetts##imported-end##

Is there a way use some sort of third party forum moderation to cut through this problem? Then you could go on in whatever way you are comfortable, your forums could continue to buzz and anyone that's up to no good would hit a brick wall (or get a call from their local authorities, as appropriate). It's just a thought.##imported-begin##Melanie_Maryland##imported-end##

It makes sense about not continuing with "business as usual" — I couldn't do it, either. But I can't see ghost writing as being satisfying for someone with as strong a voice as yours. Being an evangelist for the likes of Apple or Adobe might be cool, but would that let you continue with the stream of consciousness riffs that have obviously been satisfying for you — and been so energizing for us, your readers? Don't know.##imported-begin##Aaliyah_Ohio##imported-end##

Dear Diana, Liz, Michael & family, Our hearts are filled with sorrow for the loss of someone who clearly made our lives so much fun. Dennis will be missed very much by the Modesto family. We are so proud that he was our family member and that we had the opportunity to enjoy his zest and energy for living to the full extent. Dennis' 68 years on earth might have seemed short but he really lived a very full life. He will be indeed missed but he was much loved. It is with a great sadness that I received the news that Dennis passed away. He has been so discreet about his cancer that I just thought, like he mentioned by email, he had a bad illness caught when travelling and will recover soon... I keep two images of him. The first one is the energetic early morning "walker", coming back in Bay Point after buying the newspaper of the day. The second one is the co-board member who gave so much time and added value to our community. We worked together on a few important changes in the home owners association and I was impressed by his professionalism and his wonderful way to lesson different opinions, propose, work hard but always with a smile. His sense of humor and friendly team spirit made these days enjoyable. It has been a great pleasure to have him on board and we missed him a lot when he left. For sure, he will still present in Bay Point. I am not able to attend the Memorial being out of town this week. My thoughts and prayers go to his family, his wonderful wife Diane and all his friends. Good Bye Dennis and Thank you !Elisabeth Gazay##imported-begin##Elisabeth Gazay##imported-end##

Dearest Dennis, You influenced my life with your dignity, wit and wisdom - your sense of fun and enjoyment - our times together were few but what great meals in the Cape we all had. You taught me how to live now and enjoy now because no-one knows what is ahead and I am grateful for that and rest assured that Di has a place in San Diego where she is so welcome to come and restore her strength and energy any time she needs it..... and to all the family and friends - I wish you all good memories..... much love barbara malk##imported-begin##barbara malk##imported-end##
